

AWARDS TO 10 CAREERISTS

Man Who Unmasked Cuba Missiles Named

The man who first discovered the Soviet missile build-up in Cuba today was selected by the National Civil Service League as one of its 10 Career Service Award winners for 1963.

He is Arthur C. Lundahl, 47, assistant director of Central Intelligence for photographic interpretation.

Mr. Lundahl's office first received the famous U-2 photos taken over Cuba on October 14. Late that night, he and his staff came to a definite determination that the Soviet Union was installing ballistic missiles on the island. He informed John A. McCone, director of Central Intelligence, who was out of town, and Mr. McCone's deputy and the Cuban crisis was on.

The service awards are made each year to 10 career workers who make outstanding contributions to the Federal Government. The league is the only organization of private citizens devoted entirely to improving the Federal career civil service. The league was founded in 1881.

20 Years With Government

Mr. Lundahl is a graduate of the University of Chicago and has 20 years Government service, in uniform and out. During World War II he served in the Navy and in 1945 became associated with the Navy Photographic Interpretation Center at Anacostia. He was chief of the PIC photogrammetry division and assistant chief engineer until 1953, when he moved to CIA.

The photo interpretation expert recently was selected for promotion to captain in the United States Naval Reserve. He lives at 4410 Chestnut street, Bethesda, Md., with his wife and two children, Ann Christine, 15, and Robert Dana, 10.

Mr. Lundahl and the other winners will be honored at a dinner at the Sheraton-Park Hotel on March 26. The others are:

Graeme C. Bannerman, 53, deputy assistant secretary of Assistant Secretary of Defense (Procurement). He was born in Washington and is charged with supervising annual defense procurement amounting to $25 billion. His home is at 3506 T street N.W.

Heads Maritime Region

Capt. Hewlett R. Bishop, 54, Atlantic Coast director, Maritime Administration, Department of Commerce. A native of Long Island, N. Y., he is in charge of the largest field division of the Maritime Administration. He lives at Freeport, N. Y.

August C. Hahn, 55, Deputy Assistant Postmaster General, is a native of Beaumont, Tex., who now lives at 1368 Fourth street N.W. He has risen through the ranks from letter carrier to his present position.

Dr. Gregory K. Hartmann, 51, technical director, United States Naval Ordnance Laboratory, was educated in his native Buffalo, N. Y., at the California Institute of Technology and Oxford. He is an expert in the field of weapons technology. He lives at 10701 Keswick street, Garrett Park, Md. Nicholas J. Oganovic, 50, Deputy Executive Director of the United States Civil Service Commission, is a native of Chisholm, Minn., and now lives at 2521 North Quebec street, Arlington, Va. He is presently responsible for improvements in Civil Service and directs the college recruitment program.

Public Health Aide

Dr. Hildrus A. Poindexter, 61, chief public health adviser for the Agency for International Development, is also a native of Washington. He has served all over the world in training persons for public health jobs in underdeveloped nations. His home is at 513 Twenty-third place N.E.

James J. Rowley, 50, Chief of the United States Secret Service, Treasury Department, is a native of New York City. For 15 years he was charged with the protection of three Presidents. He is now in charge of the entire Secret Service. His home is at 3501 Rittenhouse street N.W.

Frank A. Taylor, 60, director of the United States National Museum, Smithsonian Institution, is another native of Washington. He is a lifetime employe of the Smithsonian and is now director of the National Museum, the largest museum in the world. He lives at 6606 Thirty-second street N.W.

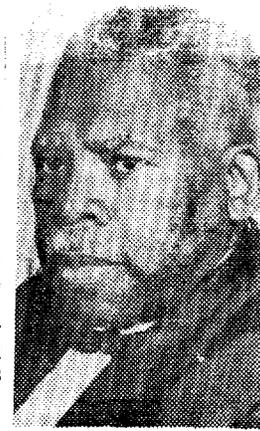

William H. Weathersby, 48, country public affairs officer, India, United States Information Service. He was born in Memphis, Tenn., and unlike most of the other winners, he did not enter the career service in his youth. He is now working in what the agency director terms the agency's "largest and most important operations abroad." He lives at Hattiesburg, Miss.

Frank A. Taylor

William H. Weathersby

Dr. H. A. Poindexter

James J. Rowley

Graeme C. Bannerman

Capt. Hewlett R. Bishop

August C. Hahn

Dr. G. K. Hartmann

Arthur C. Lundahl